Nat Fuel ups gas prices

A bump in natural gas prices will lead to a slight 1.5 percent increase for National Fuel Gas Distribution Corp. customers, the utility said Fri-

NFG said the rate hike for a typical customer using 100,000 cubic feet of natural gas a year will mean a $15.35 annual hike to $1,019.60 from $1,004.25. The rate hike is effective Sunday.

The price hike reflects the cost NFG pays for natural gas. By law utilities are not allowed to profit on the price it charges for gas but are allowed to adjust for costs every

"This adjustment is necessary to more accurately reflect the price of the natural gas the company purchases for its customers," Sandra James an NFG spokeswoman. "The amount is directly related to the actual market price of natural gas during the past three months as well as the projected price of gas that the company will be purchasing for its customers from now through July 2010. Our next opportunity to adjust gas supply charges is Feb. 1, 2010."

Despite the latest increase in gas costs rates are nearly 40 percent lower than last year, she added.

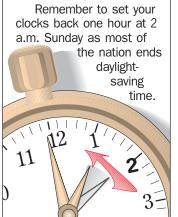

"There are things customers can do now to prepare for the months ahead," James added. "We urge customers to take steps to make sure their homes are energy efficient: drafts around doors and windows should be sealed; attics and walls should be well insulated; heating equipment and appliances should be checked to make certain they operate at peak efficiency."

She encouraged NFG customers to contact NFG about payment programs and services that may help them.

NFG serves about 214,000 customers in 14 northwestern Pennsylvania counties including Mercer County.

NFG customers can contact the company at: 1-800-365-

How frightful! Our justice system has gone awry

ERE ARE SOME thoughts from a guy who is sitting on pins and needles waiting for the new health care reform legislation to be settled. And all I can say is:

Obviously this is not something that is being taken lightly by our government officials. In both the House and Senate, I'm sure each individual is trying to add on some kind of garbage that will benefit his or her constituents rather than just worry about a good health care plan.

But what will be the final outcome? Public option or no public option? Having the public option already has scared some people people who have stock in major health insurance companies. Those stocks values are

I was discussing reasonably priced health care plans with Herald Business Writer Michael Roknick recently and we decided on the best option of all. When ever you have some kind of health problem you can't pay for, simply go out and commit a crime and get thrown in prison. That way the taxpayers will cover most of the cost of your health

And talk about expensive. The prison system also has to pay for guards to take prisoners to doctors or hospitals.

So if you commit crimes against society, society takes care of you. What kind of justice

■ Talk about a failed justice system. How about the situation involving death-row murderer Kenneth Biros over in Ohio?

Biros, convicted of the heinous murder and cutting to pieces of a young Hubbard woman, received a delay in his execution because a U.S. District Court judge in Cincinnati ruled that lethal injection violates his rights as cruel and unusual punishment.

How sad is that? He kills and chops up a person and we're worried whether his rights are violated by getting a needle stuck in his arm that might miss a vein. That's happened to me donating blood and it's not a big deal. The Ohio attorney general is trying to get that stay overturned and hopefully he will be successful.

But this demonstrates how messed up our justice system really is. Prisoners have far too many rights. In this country, they have nice clean facilities, food, exercise equipment and great libraries. Of course there's also health care. Some have loving cellmates as well. (OK, that might not be considered a benefit to most of us.)

I have always believed that when you sin against society, you have no rights. Centuries ago they had the right idea. If you violated the rules of the clan, you were sent away to live out vour life on vour own. If vou returned, vou were killed.

Today, the world is too populated for that although we could force them to live in Detroit. Criminals should be thrown in a hole with a dirt floor. No books, no basketball hoops, no other human contact other than slipping in their food and water. Some other countries are much less accommodating than we. Maybe if we quit treating criminals so nicely we would have less criminal activity.

And when it comes to murder, there is one true justice. That person should be executed the same way he or she killed another person. That, or the murderer could volunteer to help society by being used as a guinea pig for scientific testing for finding cures for fatal diseases.

Now that would not only save on the number of laboratory rats that we kill, it would also help out in the long run on the costs of health care. Now that's justice!

Washington often deals with such complicated issues and speaks in such confusing language that many of us just tune out. So it has been with "carbonomics." But the time has come to pay attention, because this matter now is front and center, and there is a lot riding on the outcome.

President Barack Obama Part of has proposed "cap-and-trade" legislation — carbonomics as a key weapon in the fight Congress, put up or shut up time has arrived.

Business leaders and environmentalist support the idea. of madness, or at the least very bad policy.

A cap-and-trade policy has been in place in the European Union since 2005, and it has already spawned a multibilliondollar global carbon market that's increasing exponentially. But a growing chorus of critics worries that cap-and-trade will give big polluters a way of dodging their responsibilities and do more for speculators on Wall Street than for the environment.

Cap-and-trade is designed to make polluting expensive. Here is how it works: The government sets a limit on the amount of greenhouse gases the country may emit. That limit is then divided into shares among businesses. If company A wants to exceed its share, it has to pay someone else to equally reduce its greenhouse-gas emissions. Company A can buy an "allowance" from a company that is not using its full share, or it can buy an "offset." Offsets come from companies in countries that don't have cap-andtrade laws, but agree to re-

Government against global warming. For Accountability Office and others show offsets often yield little to no environmental bene-

Take, for example, the ex-Some others see it as a form perience of European Union companies that paid millions of dollars for offsets in China. The companies were allowed to exceed their emissions cap in exchange for funding what were supposed to be new clean gas and hydroelectric plants in China. But it turns out that these plants were already under construction. The upshot? The offsets provided an excuse for EU companies to exceed their emissions cap, but did not lead to overall reductions in greenhouse gases. In another example, EU companies paid millions of dollars for offsets from an Indian company that manufactures a refrigerant gas. The Indian company agreed to reduce its toxic emissions, and in return, it was paid for every ton of pollution it no longer generated. But the offset payments proved so lucrative, the Indian company increased gas production just to earn millions more in offsets. A Stanford University study concluded that offsets were "an excessive subsidy that represents a massive waste of developed world resources."

Business leaders and environmentalist support the ("cap-andtrade") idea. Some others see it as a form of madness.

The United States does not yet have a national cap-andtrade policy, but some states do. And the domestic market in offsets is booming. It's not just companies buying them. Environmentally conscious individuals are purchasing offsets to assuage their guilt over the carbon footprint left by everything from extravagant parties to air travel. For example, they spend millions on offsets from garbage dumps that clean up methane from rotting trash. Sounds good, but these landfills already were collecting methane to sell as fuel. The offsets are an added wind-

Despite all the problems, carbon trading is expected to become the world's largest commodity market by 2020. Wall Street firms like IP Morgan Chase, Deutsche Bank and Goldman Sachs are spending millions to buy companies that offer offsets. Credit Suisse has even issued carbon derivatives. Environmental groups like Friends of the Earth worry that the rush to invest in carbon could create a speculative bubble. They say that without careful oversight, offsets will make money for Wall Street, raise costs for consumers, and do little to counter global warming. Who knows? You pick a side and hope for the best. It's decision time.

The Phantom of the Option

The public option, we hear, is about to take earthly form. While congressional leaders working to combine five health care reform bills will determine its final shape, a government-run health plan to compete with the private offerings will almost surely become reality. And the specter of a populist uprising against it will haunt centrist Democrats no

It's been quite an ordeal. Several Democrats from fairly conservative parts of the country have been held captive by tales of widespread anger against what is merely a sensible means for containing health care costs.

Republicans have filled their heads with ghost stories about the public option. Largely written by the insurers, these varns are designed to scare enough Democratic senators into killing the concept. Though a majority, Democrats need 60 votes in the Senate to ensure that legislation including a public option goes forward.

Here's what Americans really think about the public option: Nearly two-thirds favor it, according to a recent New York Times/CBS poll. The survey also found that people believe President Obama has better ideas for fixing health care than do Republicans and by a margin of 52 percent to 27 percent.

Given those poll numbers, the few Democrats wavering over a public option might ask themselves which side they ought to land on. Put differently, what in the name of Beelzebub would possess them to back Republicans on this, unless they, too, are creatures of the insurance indus-

Nonetheless, some Democ- want to consider a "trigger

rats are twisting themselves in a bizarre political dance to back home that they are fighting the phantom of 'socialized medicine." It is D a n s e

Macabre, to be sure. (Strike up that creepy violin, Saint-Saens.)

Louisiana Sen. Mary Landrieu, a Democrat, simply won't stop. "I am pressing to get a government-run, taxpayer-supported public option out of the bill," she said. Landrieu might be interested to learn that the government-run option would not be any more taxpayer-supported than the private ones. Taxpaver subsidies could be equally applied to buying into a private plan or the public version. An idea for appeasing onthe-fence "moderates" involves letting states opt out of participating in the public option. One can't imagine any state's lawmakers choosing to do that. If they did, the voters would rapidly replace them. In any event, Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, a Nevada Democrat, has included the opt-out clause in the bill. He'll do whatever it takes to calm a few phantom-obsessed Democrats.

Consider Nebraska Sen. Ben Nelson, another Democrat who persists in voicing his unhappiness with even that compromise. He's "not excited" about a public option that the states could opt out of. Rather, he wants to require states to opt in. (Go ahead, if that makes him feel better.)

mechanism," as proposed by Maine Sen. Olympia Snowe. The sole Republican publicly open to a government-run plan, Snowe has suggested a trick whereby the option would appear only if private insurers don't offer enough "affordable" coverage.

Sen. Claire McCaskill, a Missouri Democrat, offers kind words about both roundabout ways for enabling a public option. "I think we end up with some opportunity to go to some kind of nonprofit," she said on Sunday. You can get from Chicago to Los Angeles by changing planes in Hawaii.

Well, I've been going on and on and on about this public-option business for months. The least pleasant part has been countering the rumors of torch-bearing masses defending the honor of the private insurers.

But it will soon be over. I now hear the cock crowing with the dawn. Let us toll the bell for the phantom of the option.

N.C. county rebuilds its roots

RUTHERFORDTON, N.C. (AP) — Charged with growing entrepreneurs in rural Rutherford County, Tim Will surveyed foothills numbed by 14 percent unemployment and illiteracy and limited by few high-speed links to the global marketplace.

But one other statistic caught the newcomer's eye: the county's 6,000 small plots of land, much of it overgrown former farmland.

What if played-out cotton fields, Will wondered, grew fruits and vegetables again? And what if the produce was marketed online to Charlotte restaurants hungry for locally raised foods?

The Charlotte Observer reported that the result is Farmers Fresh Market, now ending its third year. Charlotte chefs log on to its Web site, clicking on the purple potatoes or haricot verts that please them. The produce is delivered to of harvest.

This year, 87 Rutherford growers marketed their produce that way.

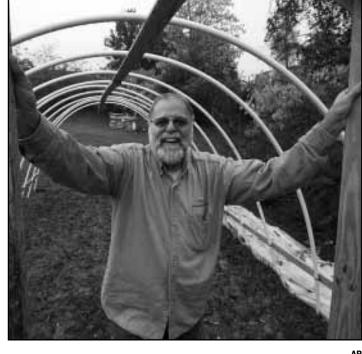

A San Francisco think tank, Civic Ventures, got wind of the market, which is believed to be the only one of its kind in North Carolina. Each year Civic Ventures awards "Purpose Prize" to social innovators older than 60 who do good things in their "encore"

That's why Tim Will is now $100,000 richer.

As you might expect from a former Peace Corps volunteer, affordable-housing advocate and inner-city teacher, Will shrugs off his role, crediting the community's effort.

"What's happened to them, they didn't cause this," he said of the boom and bust of the county's textile and furniture industries. "Over four decades, these people forgot how to grow stuff.'

Purpose Prize Alexandra Kent said Will, 61, broadband Internet access.

was chosen as "an inspiring role model" from among 1,200 nominations.

Will won, she said, "for his their kitchens within 24 hours innovative approach to solving important and timely issues: job creation, ecological sustainability and the preservation of family farms."

Rutherford County lost 7,000 to 8,000 jobs in the past decade, says local newspaper publisher Jim Brown, chairman of Foothills Connect, the nonprofit business and technology agency Will heads.

"Putting people back to work is as important as the product they sell," Brown said. "And the straw that stirs the drink here is Tim Will."

The pairing happened by luck. A few years ago, Will watched "The Last of the Mohicans," filmed partly in Rutherford County, and decided the scenic hills were so beautiful he would die in

He and his wife Eleanor pulled up stakes in 2006, leaving his teaching job at a Miami high school. He was stunned to learn that Rutherdirector ford County schools lacked

Will fell into a job at Foothills Connect, where previous experience as a system integrator — analyzing what industrial processes can be automated — paid off.

The technology for Farmers Fresh Market fell into place. A $1.4 million grant from the N.C. Golden Leaf Foundation paid for 100 miles of fiber-optic cable that spread broadband service across the county, including all schools, police and fire departments.

It took time to convince Rutherford growers that their small bits of land could profit in a market 74 miles away in Charlotte. Chefs, they found, were willing to pay more for rare varieties.

Steadily, borlotti beans, Bull's Blood beets and Lacinato kale sprouted in the red clay. Garden-variety tomatoes were replaced by heirloom varieties so flavorful, market manager Kirk Wilson said, that 20 minutes after eating one "you can still taste it in your mouth."

Jean-Pierre Marechal, executive chef at the Charlotte Marriott City Center, was the first to feature Rutherford County produce at the hotel's Tim Will of Rutherfordton, N.C., won a $100,000 prize for creating an Internet-based market for local farmers to sell their produce to chefs in Charlotte. Will has collected ideas from local expertise, like this inexpensive hoop house made of rebar, PVC pipe, and plastic sheet, that can be built anywhere to extend the growing season.

Savannah Red restaurant. The market now also sells to groups of Charlotte residents.

"The possibility to have vegetables picked in the morning and have it in your kitchen that afternoon, it's a new world," he said.

Foothills hopes to show the county's young people, many of whom leave for jobs elsewhere, that they might again make a living from farming.

The agency began a smallfarm sustainable agriculture course, emphasizing business aspects, that has graduated 120 students. R-S Central High School's 3-year-old sustainableag curriculum has tripled to more than 200 students.

We're not just losing our farms and our families, we're losing our heritage," said Jill Maner, one of the farm-school graduates. "We have to show that they don't need 160 acres of land and a $140,000 trac-

Tim Will says Rutherford County is only the beginning. He vows to spread its business model across the state, through the state's six other business-technology centers, connecting growers with their land and consumers with their

Congress urged to help dairy industry

WASHINGTON (AP) More must be done to address dire conditions facing the dairy industry, farmers told Congress this week.

"The past year has been the most difficult since I began farming in 1973," said Paul Toft, a Rice Lake, Wis., dairy farmer and president of the Associated Milk Producers Inc. "Some say these times rival those of the Great Depression."

Toft was one of eight people who submitted testimony to a subcommittee of the Senate Agriculture Committee. The hearing, chaired by Sen. Kirsten Gillibrand, D-N.Y., focused on what the federal government can do to combat low dairy prices.

Industry experts said that Congress' decision last month to set aside $350 million for struggling milk farmers is a good start, but other steps need to be taken or more farms will fail.

Toft said Congress needs to look at new price stabilization efforts and controls on imports as it looks toward the 2012 Farm Bill.

Edward W. Gallagher, vice president of economics and risk management at Dairylea Cooperative, based in Syracuse, N.Y., called current conditions "the worst cost squeeze ... perhaps in history."

Gallagher said a certain amount of price fluctuation is inherent in dairy farming, but "more risk management education ... and financial incentives are needed to change the practices on dairy farms.

"There is something fundamentally wrong with the way dairy farmers are paid for their work," Gillibrand said. "We must develop new solutions to ensure that this does not ever happen again.'

Weak labor market holds down pay

WASHINGTON (AP) - cent rise in the 12 months tember, as high unemployment restrained wage and benefit growth.

The data shows the weak labor market makes it difficult for people with jobs to demand higher pay and benefits.

The Labor Department said Friday that the cost of wages, health care and other benefits increased by 1.5 percent in the year ending in September, the smallest increase since 4.7 percent in the 12-month such records began in June period, more than the 3.9 per-

Penn Northwest finds bright spots in gloomy year

By Michael Roknick Herald Business Editor

With the national and local economy getting hammered by the recession over the past year, it was an uncomfortable time for developers.

"Without a doubt this has been a very challenging year economically throughout the county," said Larry Reichard, executive director of Penn-Northwest Development Corp.

Speaking at the organization's annual breakfast meeting at Penn State Shenango Campus on Friday, Reichard said Mercer County's lead economic development agency has worked on 15 industrial projects with decisions still pending in the upcoming months.

Largest cruise ship sets

HELSINKI (AP) — The world's largest cruise liner on Friday began its maiden voyage to Florida, gliding out from a shipyard in Finland with an amphitheater, basketball courts and an ice rink on board.

The 16-deck Oasis of the Seas spans 1,200 feet from bow to stern. Its 2,700 cabins can accommodate 6.300 passengers and 2,100 crew.

Commissioned by Royal Caribbean International, the ship cost $1.5 billion and took two and a half years to build at the STX Finland Oy shipyard in Turku, southwestern Finland.

The liner has four swimming pools, volleyball and basketball courts, and a vouth zone with theme parks and nurseries for children. There is also an ice rink that seats 780 spectators and a smallscale golf course.

The Oasis of the Seas is due to make its U.S. debut on Nov. 20 and the ship will embark on its first cruise — a four-day trip to the port of Labadee in Haiti — on Dec. 1.

The Oasis of the Seas left Finland's frosty shores on Friday and is set to exit the Baltic Sea on Saturday, when it must squeeze under the Great Belt Bridge between two Danish islands.

The enormous ship features various "neighborhoods" parks, squares and arenas with special themes. One of them will be a tropical environment, including palm trees and vines among the total 12,000 plants on board. They will be planted after the ship arrives in Fort Lauderdale.

In the stern, a 750-seat outdoor theater — modeled on an ancient Greek amphitheater — doubles as a swimming pool by day and an ocean front theater by night. The pool has a diving tower with spring boards and two 33-feet high dive platforms. An indoor theater seats 1,300 guests.

Accommodation includes loft cabins measuring 545 square feet with floor-to-ceiling windows. There are also 1,600-square-feet luxury suites with balconies overlooking the sea or promenades.

The holiday season is meant for good friends, good times and lots of good food.

That's why we created a compilation cookbook from the first three years of In Good Taste recipes filled with culinary creations from around our region. But even better, with every purchase of our Views & Voices Cookbook, a donation is made to the Community Food Warehouse of Mercer County which supplies 35 food pantries around the county.

So while you're giving the gift of good taste to yourself and others, you are also helping those in need around you, especially during the holidays. Give the gift that keeps on giving.

Buy a cookbook. Help someone in need.

Cookbooks can be purchased at The Herald in Sharon, Allied News in Grove City, Mercer Area Chamber of Commerce, The Kitchen Shoppe in Volant, Organics and More in Sandy Lake; and Grove Manor in Grove City.

Dear reader: Diverticular disease is a condition of the digestive tract characterized by small pouches that protrude through the muscular wall of the large intestine. When a number of pouches are present, the condition is known as diverticulosis. When inflammation occurs, the condition is known as diverticuli-

Diverticulosis is rather common and occurs frequently with advancing age. The condition is observed more often in women than in men. Causes may include a weakening in the wall of the colon, chronic constipation, the repeated use of laxatives and enemas, and a low-fiber diet.

Because of a lack of symptoms, the condition often goes undiagnosed. In fact, it may be discovered only during the course of a barium enema Xray. When symptoms do occur, they often present in the lower left side of the abdomen. They can occur on the right and have been confused with appendicitis. Nausea, vomiting, bloating, pain and alternating constipation and diarrhea have been reported.

When no symptoms present, there is no need for medical treatment with the exception of the modification to a high-fiber diet. Speak with your primary-care physician or gastroenterologist regarding ways you can bring your diverticulosis under control.

Spinal stenosis is a narrowing of one or more areas of the spine. The condition can cause pain and numbness, cramping, and even difficulties with bladder and bowel function. Mild symptoms can often be helped with over-the-counter pain relievers, physical therapy or a brace. More severe cases might require surgery.

There are two ways that disc herniation occurs. The first is when the disc simply slips out of place. This puts pressure on the nerves and spinal cord. The second is when there is a tear in the cartilage on the outer portion of the spinal disc. This allows the inner fluid to seep out, putting pressure on spinal nerves. Regardless of the cause, this condition can cause pain, discomfort and limited range of motion. Mild symptoms can be controlled by rest, over-thecounter pain medication, muscle relaxants, hydrotherapy and decreased activity. More severe cases will likely be controlled by prescription medication and more aggressive ther-

If you haven't had an exacerbation of symptoms for seven years, I would consider you quite stable. Speak with your physician regarding a possible exercise regimen so you can remain as active as possible. While you should remain cautious and not overdo, you can put your fears on the back burner and enjoy life.

Mercer wins 5th straight

By Patrick Connelly Allied News Sports Editor

Thanks to a huge 42-7 win Friday night at West Middlesex, coach Pat McClearn's Mercer High Mustangs now have just one team standing between them and a berth in the District 10 Class A playoffs backyard rival Lakeview.

"That's what we play for," said McClearn. "To have the opportunity in Week 10 to get ourselves into the playoffs ... that's our goal every year."

Senior Rawlins Huntley has been a standout all season on the defensive side of the ball for Mercer and the win over the Big Reds was no exception. Huntley picked off a pass from quarterback Kyle Wimer to prevent a game tieing score in the 2nd quarter and returned it 99 yards to give the Mustangs a 14-0 lead.

The Trojans' 42-7 triumph over Reynolds at Stewart Field fanned the flames as they contend with Hickory and Oil City for either the fourth spot out of Region 3-AA or possibly an at-large berth.

Wilmington (6-1, 8-1) and Sharon (6-1, 7-2) are assured spots, while Hickory (4-1, 5-2) hosts Oil City (3-2, 6-2) tonight. Greenville has suffered setbacks to Wilmington, Sharon and Oil City, but beat Hickory.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL 'JoePa' wants more love for Penn St.

By Genaro C. Armas AP Sports Writer

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — Joe Paterno wants some more love for his top players.

Defensive tackle Jared Odrick? Unappreciated, JoePa says. Standout linebacker Navorro Bowman? Overlooked because he was hurt early this

And don't get Paterno started on star quarterback Daryll Clark.

"I don't think Clark's gotten anywhere near the kind of credit he should have after the season he had last year and the kind of season he's having this year," Paterno said this week.

All three players have been instrumental on a Penn State team playing its most inspired ball of the season. The No. 12 Nittany Lions (7-1, 3-1 Big Ten) ride a four-game winning streak into today's game at Northwestern (5-3, 2-2).

The Hall of Fame coach tries not to over-promote his players, so his recent pleas have stood out.

It could be part public relations ploy as national postseason award nomination lists get narrowed. Or the chatter could serve as motivation to players as they prepare for the regular season's stretch run.

Penn State lost some national luster after a 21-10 defeat to Iowa at home in Week 4 dropped them out of the BCS title chase. But the offense has rebounded behind improved line play and a potent run-pass balance that keeps defenses guessing.

"I don't think we feel disrespected," said left tackle Dennis Landolt, another player singled out by Paterno as not getting enough credit. "We just know some games we're not as good as we need to be. I feel that we're making progress on that."

And then some. The Nittany Lions have overwhelmed their last four foes since Iowa by an average of four touchdowns (that includes a 52-3 rout of FCS school Eastern Illinois in Week 6.)

Clark bounced back from the subpar performance against the Hawkeyes, when he threw three interceptions, to toss eight touchdowns and one interception over the last four games. He's also rushed for four 1-yard scores in that

Clark riddled Michigan's secondary last week, going 16 for 27 for 230 yards and four

Much of the talk from reporters going into that game was the need for Clark to have a good outing in a big game, or about Wolverines freshman quarterback Tate Forcier, who Penn State tried to recruit last year. The Nittany Lions shut down Forcier and the Wolverines' dangerous spread offense.

Paterno said afterward that Clark wasn't getting his due. He reiterated the point on Tuesday — the day after it was announced that Clark was named a semifinalist for the O'Brien Award for the nation's top college quarterback.

Paterno claims he doesn't read press clippings about his team, though he doesn't like some of the questions he hears at his midweek media briefings.

"I come to these meetings and you guys start asking me about a lot of other people and I get the feeling that, just as we went into Michigan, that our guys had to show, Clark had to show, that he could compare to a couple of freshmen," Paterno said. "Whether

NHL Pens win

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) Pittsburgh scored twice in the final 3 minutes of regulation to tie it and Sidney Crosby had the only goal in the shootout to lead the Penguins to a 4-3 victory over the Columbus Blue Jackets on Friday night.

in shootout

Brent Johnson stopped 29 shots before the shootout. then stymied Antoine Vermette, Rick Nash and Kristian Huselius in the tiebreaker. The Penguins improved to 6-0-0 on the road, the franchise's best start ever away from home.

Ruslan Fedotenko and Alex Goligoski scored late goals in a 39-second span to tie it. Chris Kunitz also had a shorthanded goal and an assist. Crosby added two assists.

Nash had two goals — one while on his knees - and Derek Dorsett his first of the season for the Blue Jackets, who lost their third in a row.

Mason had 29 saves for Columbus.

The Penguins were playing without center Evgeni Malkin. Sidelined by a strained right shoulder, he missed his first game in three years.

With a large portion of the capacity crowd of 19,136 cheering for the Penguins, the Blue Jackets slowly built a two-goal lead.

Nash broke through late in the first on the power play. He collected the puck behind the cage and tried a wraparound, the puck sliding to the right wing where Derick Brassard's wrister was blocked by Johnson. Nash had skated to the slot and was knocked down. While still on his knees, the rebound came to him and he jammed the puck in for his seventh of the season.

It was his first goal with a man advantage this season he has twice as many shorthanded goals so far.

Nash made it 2-0 early in the second on a seemingly innocuous play. Vermette slipped a pass from behind the net to Nash, who was charging down the right wing. Nash just put his stick on the ice near the edge of the right circle and flicked the puck past Johnson's right skate.

The Penguins cut into the lead after not getting a call. With Pittsburgh a man down, Kunitz had a breakaway and was brought down by defenseman Fedor Tyutin's diving poke check. With the Pittsburgh fans booing lustily as play continued, Kunitz ended up with the puck on the left doorstep and lifting it high over Mason's glove and into the net.

Dorsett gave Columbus a 3-1 lead late in the second. The Blue Jackets killed a penalty with Sammy Pahlsson coming out of the box in stride to feed Dorsett, who faked and then beat Johnson.

Cavs earn 1st win of '09

NBA

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) LeBron James scored 24 points to lead the Cleveland Cavaliers to their first victory of the season, 104-87 over the Minnesota Timberwolves on Friday night. James took most of the fourth quarter off, finishing with nine rebounds and six assists in 34 minutes and avoiding his first 0-3 start in five years. He shot 10 for 18 from the field while the Cavs used the renovated Timberwolves to revive their defense.

Mo Williams added 20 points and Zydrunas Ilgauskus bucketed 11 points for the Cavaliers.

Defensively, the disruptive play of Odrick (five sacks) often earns him a double team, opening things up for teammates such as promising end Jack Crawford (team-high 5½ sacks) on one of the Big Ten's best lines.

Bowman has been a force at linebacker since returning from a right groin injury that sidelined him for much of the season's first three weeks. He and middle linebacker Josh Hull have played well as team captain Sean Lee eases back into the lineup from a left knee sprain.

Now the nation's stingiest defense (8.9 points allowed per game), Odrick, Bowman & Co. have given the offense more than enough cushion to get going.

A rebuilt offensive line has improved. Royster, who was slowed early by a flulike illness, has averaged 109 yards rushing during the win streak.

Working with a young receiving corps, Clark has led the way — much as he has done since taking over as starting quarterback in 2008. His 36 career touchdown passes are five short of tying the school record.

Whether we're being recognized or not, as long as we're winning it's fine with me," Clark said.

Choose a Chiropractor Finally, be aware of high pressure practors include manipulation, First, when responding to ads offering free services...BE CAREFUL. You usually pay for them somewhere along the line.

Secondly, be leery of doctors that run different ads every other week claiming to be the only doctor in town with breakthrough treatments for multiple ailments. Usually these treatments are not covered by insurance and end up costing you thousands of dollars out of your pocket. Besides, if it was that big of a breakthrough and worked, don't you think most doctors in town would be offering it?

Third, think twice before giving up your bank account, checking account or credit card numbers. Patients are usually unaware that when you do this, it gives the doctor a chance to go in and drain your bank accounts after the first visit.

sales tactics. If a doctor sounds like a door-to-door salesman, and he makes your condition seem like you have one foot in the grave...get a SECOND OPINION. Furthermore, if they state that they are the only one that can help you, but it's going to require months of treatment and cost thousands of dollars...get a SECOND OPINION. These types of tactics are not only unethical, but they are illegal.

When choosing a chiropractor, ask around. Ask your medical doctor. Most doctors work well with chiropractors and know which ones are reputable. A typical visit should include consultation, exam, x-rays if needed, a report of findings, a treatment plan and finally an explanation of your financial obligation. Most insurances cover chiropractic care. Typical treatments offered by chirotherapy, massage and nutrition. Though chiropractors treat the whole body, the main focus is on neuromuscular and skeletal conditions. There shouldn't be a need to sign contracts to commit to care. If you are being asked to do so, you might want to reconsider.

There are plenty of good and ethical chiropractors around from which to choose — so choose wisely. The doctor should be willing to answer any questions you might have about your chiropractic care. Remember, it doesn't cost anything to ask questions before you choose, but it may cost you more than you expected if you don't.

Cleveland coordinator upset by protest

BEREA, Ohio (AP) — Eric Mangini has a Darth Vader mask hanging in his office. Appropriate perhaps, considering how Browns fans feel about their team these days.

Fan displeasure is running rampant in Cleveland, where a 1-6 start has the Browns headed toward their eighth losing season in 11 years since returning to the NFL. Two longtime season-ticket holders are planning a protest before Cleveland's Monday night game on Nov. 16, urging fans to stay away from their seats for the opening kickoff to send a message after so many years of losing.

At least one Browns coach is firing back.

"That (ticks) me off. This is Cleveland. They're going to show up and back this damn team," outspoken defensive coordinator Rob Ryan said. "This is a town that's tough and that loves football. Nobody's happy. I hate me, too. So they hate me. Great. Doesn't mean you turn your back.

"I've got a kid who flunked class one time and it (ticked) me off. I don't turn my back on him. I go get a tutor and help him.

The Browns could use a little tutoring on both sides of the ball, since they rank near the bottom of the NFL in most categories.

The offense is averaging the second-fewest number of yards per game and the defense is allowing the most yards in the league.

The offense has scored four touchdowns in seven games. The defense was burned on a 71-yard touchdown pass by Green Bay last week after quarterback Aaron Rodgers read the coverage and audibled to Donald Driver.

After the game, Rodgers said he knew what blitz was coming based on film study, and that the Packers' scout team ran it better during the week than Browns safety Abe Elam did in the game.

before the game," said Ryan, frame. who earlier this season harshly criticized Buffalo quarterback Trent Edwards. "The guys who tell you how much they're going to kick your butts, and then they do it or you can shut them up. He can say whatever he wants. I don't care about him."

Browns fans, meanwhile, say it's the team that is testing their patience.

Mike Randall and Tony Schafer, fixtures in Cleveland's famous Dawg Pound, are hoping the sight of so many empty orange seats on national TV against the Baltimore Ravens will send a strong message to team owner Randy Lerner, who hand-picked Mangini as his new coach earlier this year.

Mangini has traded away most of the stars from an offense that was among the league's best two years ago. It has left first-year offensive coordinator Brian Daboll searching for playmakers on a unit that has failed to score a touchdown in four of seven

"I don't blame (fans) for wanting a timetable. Losing is not fun for anyone," Daboll said. "I really believe good things are going to come ... I'm convinced the people we have in this building will turn this thing around."

When that will happen, no one seems to know.

"Nothing is ever given to Cleveland. Hell, their team was taken away one time," Rvan said. "You think you're not going to fight for that team? Yeah you are. "A little adversity happens, you don't turn your back. You rub your hands together and fight harder. So it doesn't look like we've got Jim Brown back there right now. Well it's not easy. We'll fight and get better. Our fans deserve better and we're going to give them ∟ better."
